We met Dan through his landscape design profession many years ago. It didn't take long for us to count him among our good friends. He was kind and caring for people and his work showed a love of land, plants and beauty. He was rightly proud of his work and it saddened him if a customer didn't maintain his creations after he finished (which didn't happen often because the results were always great.) Many men love their families but Dan's love made him willing to go to any length for his family and he did. All who knew him will miss him. We will pray for you to have wonderful memories of this wonderful man. Mark & Denise Rutenbeck

Danny was in my high school class. And although i never got to know him that well, he seemed to give a level of respect for even those he didnt hang with (he hung with a more popular crowd). I guess what I feeling is that he had an understanding heart.
